
Pro Rege

Volume 31
Number 2 Fine Arts Issue 2002

Article 16

December 2002

Animal Rites

Mike Vanden Bosch
Dordt College

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcollections.dordt.edu/pro_rege

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Vanden Bosch, Mike (2002) "Animal Rites," Pro Rege: Vol. 31: No. 2, 29.
Available at: https://digitalcollections.dordt.edu/pro_rege/vol31/iss2/16

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the University Publications at Digital Collections @ Dordt. It has been accepted for inclusion in Pro Rege by an authorized administrator of Digital Collections @ Dordt. For more information, please contact ingrid.mulder@dordt.edu.

Animal Rites

Mike Vanden Bosch

Home from the cavalry, he backs into farming. Now, low on oats, out of corn, he sees an ad: “Old nags for sale: cheap.” Ah, a way to turn horse meat into pork and gold, he thinks, but then he feels eerily crippled by scruples. He wouldn’t have given—had he had one—a kingdom for a horse, but still he waits to ring the number till soft-heart mom is out—

to her horses were horses—animals—neighbors like Bell and Star who’d sweat years for him. He trucks the nags home in twilight, tight-lipped, wanting no help unloading. He stalls seven days, feeding oats to them like old pets. On the eighth day he halts the silver, leads her to the hogs, and shoots it before he can change his mind. A 4-10 slug in the forehead drops her like a sling of hay. He can’t bear to look: mane in the mud, nostril flared, blue eye blank. He turns to leave, but he looks back to see hog hooves stomp silver into mud. With hyena humor, ten sows, jowls bloody, exult at huge horse rumps

like avenging dogs lapping up the blood of Jezebel.

“Animal Rites” appeared in the 2002 edition of Lyrical Iowa.