Rag Rug

by David Schelhaas

On the dining room floor
In front of the door
Lies a round woven rug
A gift from Aunt Jen
A circle of love
Made of rags from our lives
A jumper a skirt and a jacket of yours
A pants and a sportcoat of mine.

The rug like our marriage was fashioned with unfinished pieces
And the pattern could not be imagined before it was made.
She chose from our rag box odd pieces
Matched barely
But in placing and bending these pieces her blending made beauty
One weaving.

The rug which is almost as old as our marriage
Has been washed, shaken out, and stomped upon some Yet the colors are bright
The pattern now set is a frequent delight
And the weaving's just right
Not too loose, not too tight
Supple enough to lie flat on the floor
But stiff enough still to fulfill
All the purposes rugs are made for
A beautiful functional thing
This circle of love
This rug in a ring.
