
Pro Rege

Volume 44
Number 2 Fine Arts Issue 2015

Article 5

December 2015

On Never Having Visited Mount Hermon

Rose Postma
Dordt College, rose.postma@dordt.edu

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcollections.dordt.edu/pro_rege

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Postma, Rose (2015) "On Never Having Visited Mount Hermon," Pro Rege:
Vol. 44: No. 2, 8.
Available at: https://digitalcollections.dordt.edu/pro_rege/vol44/iss2/5

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the University Publications at Digital Collections @ Dordt. It has been accepted for inclusion in Pro Rege by an authorized administrator of Digital Collections @ Dordt. For more information, please contact ingrid.mulder@dordt.edu.

On Never Having Visited Mount Hermon

Rose Postma

My mother hung the cross stitch I made, framed with a canning jar ring, one chicken saying to another no fowl language spoken here next to the trivet: mosaic tiles glued on the decussate during the first part of the week at Mount Hermon Family Camp and finished by her cousin in the second, neither family able to spare a full week away from the dairy and the cows' daily need of milking. And when we would drive through the mountains near Santa Cruz my mother would roll the window down, breathe deeply of the bleeding eucalyptus trees and say, this looks just like Mount Hermon, and driving on the Blue Ridge Parkway outside of Asheville

I find myself rolling down the window, breathing in a sadness I didn't know I had swarming like minnows released into the shallows of a river, and saying, this looks just like Mount Hermon without ever having been there.