December 2006

Rock

Bill Elgersma
Dordt College, bill.elgersma@dordt.edu

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcollections.dordt.edu/pro_rege Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://digitalcollections.dordt.edu/pro_rege/vol35/iss2/2

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the University Publications at Digital Collections @ Dordt. It has been accepted for inclusion in Pro Rege by an authorized administrator of Digital Collections @ Dordt. For more information, please contact ingrid.mulder@dordt.edu.
These prairie flats, no stones, no trees, no lakes but mostly, no rocks.

The Bible talks stones casting stones, and mill stones rolling stones, and hilltops and tomb stones.

Peter the rock and foundations built on stone but this is dirt clay and silt and sand and loam rich to be sure, but not rock

When the wind blows the rock stands but plains move to pile up like mustached snowdrifts black-tinted with ever fertile dustings

Buffalo grazed and moved and grazed ruts and rivulets to follow their trenching hooves.
More delicate, the deer still worn paths to watering holes and better feed

This tender face, so quick to gouge victim to the elements stands firm to nothing But gives with time to absorb with peace but not to shatter nor resist.

Perhaps this scape, this verdant mat a maternal touch to a crusted world shapes people and place and mind, Softly given to teaching Giving God’s grace in a world of hard.