Dordt Plans First Commencement

by Merle Buwald

DORDT IN RETROSPECT

Within a decade, Dordt has sprouted from a "seedling" organization into a flowering, academic institution with fifty-eight "budding" graduates as the fruit of the showers of God's blessings. Progress has been the by-word in Dordt's 10-year history with additions and new developments lifting Dordt to its present status in academic ratings. A nucleus of 35 students pioneered the trail through Dordt's stage of infancy in 1955, now, in 1965, this "infant" has passed through its "adolescent" stage, and has graduated into adulthood, bearing an offspring of 58 graduates out of a total enrollment of 434 students! Dordt has certainly experienced its growing-pains due to its rapid rate of growth, but it's "adolescent" stage, and has graduated into adulthood, bearing an offspring of 58 graduates out of a total enrollment of 434 students! Dordt has certainly experienced its growing-pains due to its rapid rate of growth, but I feel that this rate of maturation is a witness to the zeal for Christian education as it is so keenly felt by our devoted parents, teachers, administration, and all other loyal supporters of this institution.

Commencement Exercise

Friday evening, May 28, marks the highlight of Dordt's 10th anniversary—its first graduating class as a four year college. This event will take place at 4:00 p.m. in the Sioux Center Public Auditorium. At this momentous occasion, A.B. liberal arts degrees will be granted to its 58 seniors, who comprise this first graduating class. These graduates can be classified under four different vocational categories: Elementary Education—23; General Education—6; Secondary Education—22; Pre-Seminary—5.

Commencement Address

Dr. Calvin Seerveld, Professor of Philosophy at Trinity College in Chicago will present the Commencement address. He has earned the reputation of being a very intellectual young man, who has combined his youthful vigor with his scholarly adeptness into a staunch defense of the Reformed faith. Dr. Seerveld's abilities as a lecturer are widely recognized and respected by those who champion the cause of Christian Education.

Refreshments

Following the Commencement exercises, relatives and friends are invited to the Dordt Commons for refreshments. It has once been said that an experience attains its fullest meaning only when it can be shared with others, and after successfully completing one's College career, there certainly are many experiences to share! The graduates will be available to meet their relatives and friends at this time, and will display the real Dordt spirit of "comradery"!

President's Breakfast

As a prelude to the graduation festivities, a President's breakfast has been scheduled for the seniors and the faculty, which is to be held at 8:00 a.m. Friday, May 28. This will be an opportunity for the graduates to offer their personal expressions of appreciation to the faculty and administration members, and also it will be a final occasion for the faculty to express their congratulations and to challenge the graduates to pursue the motto on the very cornerstone of Dordt—Soli Deo Gloria.

Graduate Receives Dordt Appointment

Miss Mary Hooper, senior at Dordt College, has received an appointment to Dordt College as an assistant instructor of English.

Miss Hooper came to Dordt College four years ago from Brooten, Minnesota. While at college she has been majoring in English, and will graduate magna cum laude.

Outstanding Senior

Elroy Post has received an Outstanding Senior Award which is granted by the American Chemical Society. Elroy is one of four senior chemistry students honored by the Sioux Valley Section of the A.C.S. The formal presentation took place on Saturday, May 15, at South Dakota State University at Brookings, South Dakota.

A New Arrival

In August 1965 there will be a new addition to Dordt's campus. The band room will become the home of a new Slicker custom-built organ. The two manual organ has a full pedal board, and is semi-portable. Voiced in the classic tradition, the organ consists of five ranks of pipes.

The organ has considerable flexibility due to careful unification. The pipes may be exposed, or they may be enclosed in an expression box.

The immediate purpose of the organ is use for private lessons, as well as practice. No doubt some student recitals will also be presented on the Slicker organ. Such an instrument is certainly an asset to Dordt's music department, as well as to the college generally. Many schools much larger than Dordt cannot offer their students such a benefit as this.

Outstanding Senior

Elroy Post has received an Outstanding Senior Award which is granted by the American Chemical Society. Elroy is one of four senior chemistry students honored by the Sioux Valley Section of the A.C.S. The formal presentation took place on Saturday, May 15, at South Dakota State University at Brookings, South Dakota.

Some of you, through your encounter with the Bald Soprano, have been initiated into the Theater of the Absurd. This play, by the same author, is another representative example. However, The Chairs is a later production than the Bald Soprano and its statement is more mature and more serious.

The plot is simple: an old man has a message for the world, and has invited an orator to deliver it for him. The old man and his wife have therefore asked numerous people to be present. The people arrive, but only in the form of chairs. The old man and woman keep up a steady stream of non-essential conversation as they gradually fill the stage with these unoccupied chairs.

The separation motif here is obvious enough, as is the existential philosophy of man viewed as a non-entity. However, it is not climaxied until the orator arrives at the home. He cannot speak and makes only unintelligible grunts. Furthermore, when presented a blackboard he can write only meaningless jumbles of letters.

We now see why Ionesco called this play a tragic farce, and are frightened at this picture of modern society. The Chairs has succeeded as literature in that it has caused us to see again that something is wrong with the world. It remains for us to go to theology for a way of extrication.

Float Entered In Tulip Festival Parade

In view of the graduation of the first senior class at Dordt College, and in view of the completion of the college’s first ten years, the student council decided that it would be fitting to enter a float in the Orange City Tulip Festival parade.

A committee, consisting of Rich Verver, Mavis Assink, and Don Boner, was chosen to design and construct such a float. The Committee decided on a design which would depict both the college’s first graduation and the celebration of its tenth anniversary.

Although the float did not win any prizes, it is the “unbiased” opinion of this writer that it was one of the best floats in the parade.

The committee wishes to take this opportunity to thank all of those who helped in any way to make this project successful and especially wish to thank George Vande Voort, who gave of his time and energy to construct the float, and who also allowed us to use his car to pull it.

Les Beaux Arts

by Dick Leerhoff

probably at no other time in history has art had such an impact on society, nor has there ever been a time when every layman has been subject to some form of art. consequently, with all this interest in art, artists and their art products are tremendous influences in the shaping of today’s thought and activities. What is the significance of all this for us as Christian scholars?

If art is such a powerful force in society today, why aren’t there more Christians employing this valuable medium? First of all the church has put a damper on artistic expression. In fact the church severely prejudiced our thinking in two areas of art. It seems that we have always taken a negative view of art, and if art is discussed at all the discussion usually concerns whether or not art can exist at all in Christian circles. It is about time that we stopped complaining about all the imperfections we can find in the art world and began producing some Christian artists who could influence artistic thought.

Nothing will ever be accomplished by sitting passively and discussing the immorality of the artist.

The field is open for our young people. In our circles there are no good novelists or poets; there may be painters, but their influence has been slight. So far no one has dared to take the theater and dance too seriously. Another field that is sadly lacking in qualified personnel is the area of esthetics and art criticism. Several theologians have presented their views on art, but recently little distinguished literature on the relationship of art and the Christian has been published. God must not be too happy with what we have done with art. It is a shame really since we with our sound doctrinal heritage could produce one of the most ideal artistic developments.

ECHO . . .

A club, not an echo—this was the ambition of Political Science Club at the beginning of the school term. Tuesday night, May 18, the club “challenged” the Communist Party of the United States. Perhaps the effectiveness of this challenge might be judged by the student body to be merely an echo. But for the club members, the panel discussion served to stimulate their awareness of the subversive activities of the Communist Party in America by reporting what the party is and how it works.

The club officers for the next school term were elected at the meeting. The new administration is: Roger Van Dyken, President; Dennis De Jong, Vice President; Cecilia Drent, Secretary; Norman Bomer, Treasurer.
The civil rights program, about which you have heard so much is a farce and a sham—an effort to set up a police state in the guise of liberty. I am opposed to that program. I fought it in the Congress. It is the province of the state to run its own elections.” The above is taken from a speech delivered in Austin, Texas, on May 22, 1948, by Lyndon B. Johnson. The farce and sham of the present “civil rights” drive is the most fantastic display of deception and hypocrisy ever displayed in America. The Communists are using the same strategy which brought Algeria under their rule. For purposes of strategy the Communists regard the Negroes as an exploited colony, one to be used as an agitator and eventually tormented into revolting for their “freedom and independence.”

The official Communist line for the exploitation of the Negro people in our country was laid down in the booklet, American Negro Problems, published in 1928. It was written by Joseph Pogany, alias Joseph Peppers, who had been one of the top men in the infamous Ben Bella regime in Hungary. Pogany was sent specifically by Stalin to lay the groundwork for the eventual Negro Revolutionary Movement in America. In his book, Pogany emphasized the idea that “The ‘black belt’ of the south . . . constitutes virtually a colony within the body of the United States of America.” Thus, the Communist Party determined to work for the “liberation movement of the Negro people.” The basic goal of these tactics was expressed by the Moscow directive that “the Negro Communists should emphasize in their propaganda the establishment of a Negro Soviet Republic.”

In 1935, Communists James W. Ford and James S. Allen published The Negroes in a Soviet America, which again emphasized that “the Communists fight for the right of the Black Belt territory to self-determination.” This booklet revealed the two phases of Communist objectives in the United States. One phase concerns the “revolution of the ‘black belt’,” and the other phase concerns the “proletarian revolution” which “may overthrow capitalism and establish a Soviet Government for the country as a whole before the revolution comes to a head in the Black Belt.” Whichever comes first makes no difference to the Communists. They are presently, in effect, fighting for two revolutions at once. Manning Johnson, a high ranking Negro member of the Communist Party who was murdered when he abandoned the Party, wrote in his book Color, Communism, and Common Sense that “stirring up race and class conflict is the basis of all discussion of the Communist Party’s work in the South. Black Rebellion was what Moscow wanted. Bloody race conflict would split America.” Today our streets are scenes of racial violence, and millions of good people are being fooled into supporting the Communist program which is actually designed for the enslavement of White and Negro alike. The reforms which are desired by the Negro do not interest the Communists in the least, but under the guise of reform and “self-determination,” the Communists gain the support of even the nominal anti-Communist. How would you like it if a flock of troublemakers from all over the country invaded your state for the specific purpose of breaking its laws—all under the pretense of correcting some fault of your state, while immorality and crime were rampant in their own states?

In June, 1964, the Executive Committee of the Communist Party, U.S.A. re-distributed the Ford and Allen booklet, re-emphasizing the “self-determination” tactic. It is consistently used to promote agitation and gain support in the Negro Revolutionary Movement which is designed to have the same effect as the “liberation” movement in Algeria. The Ben Bella of the “civil rights” movement is Martin Luther King, member of 60 Communist front organizations. Even ultra-liberal columnist Joseph Alsop says that King “has accepted and is almost certainly still accepting Communist collaboration and even Communist advice.” In 1960, King hired as a top level aide Jack O’Dell, a known member of the National Committee of the Communist Party, U.S.A. King, the “notorious liar” as J. Edgar called him, was photographed with leading Communists at a Communist training school in Tennessee in 1957. The school was abolitionist in name only, being subversive by the Tennessee Legislature.

If the American people would wake up to the Communist strategy in the “civil rights” movement, maybe they would also grow up and learn respect for our once great system of law and order. Only thorough these channels will the Negro people truly be helped, and the problems in the South ironed out.

Auch Wiedersehen!

Mr. Abraham Bos, instructor in German at Dordt College, will be leaving for Germany this summer.

Mr. Bos, with a group of teachers from the United States, will be studying in Germany for a ten-week period starting the middle of June—Aug. 26. Finances for this instruction are provided by the Fulbright Grant, while the instruction will take place under the Goethe Institute. However, there is one stipulation to this honor: Mr. Bos’ family will not be allowed to accompany him.

The group will be centered in Munich in southern Germany. One week will be spent in orientation to the program and area. Then there will be two three-week sessions in areas near Munich studying the literature and language.

Between the two periods there will be a two-week session which will be spent in free study time. During this time Mr. Bos will spend his time conversing with the people. Since he has been in Germany before in the military service, he hopes to look up some of his friends. Mr. Bos commented that the people are very friendly and readily take you into their homes.

The last week will be spent in Berlin. At this time they will receive lectures on the political and social issues as well as the cultural standard of the city.

Prospectus

The Thallians met for the last time this year to elect officers and discuss plans for next year. Dave Bloemendaal was elected as the new Thallians president. The office of vice-president was given to John Schuurman, and Lorna Van Gilst was chosen as secretary.

Possible plays for presentation next year were announced. The matter of academic recognition for work in drama was also discussed. The suggestion of concluding this successful year with a party was made. However, due to many tests and an end-of-the-year rush, it was postponed until next fall.

Editors, Business Manager Elected

Three sophomores were elected by the student body for the positions of Diamond editor, and Signet business manager. Terry Jonker, June Mulder, and Aldon Kuiper, respectively, were chosen to hold these positions during the 1965-66 school year.

The newly-elected Diamond editor, and Signet business manager, Terry Jonker, Orange City, Iowa, is a secondary education math major. Terry was a columnist for his high school newspaper. According to the new editor, the Diamond will be basically the same as the present publication. However, there will be a few minor changes and students will have an opportunity to make suggestions for improvement.

June Mulder, editor-elect for the Signet, is from Le Mars, Iowa. She is in the secondary education course and is majoring in German. June's position as copy editor for this year's Signet and her participation in compiling her high school yearbook qualify her for her new position.

Aldon Kuiper, Hartley, Iowa, is the new business manager for the Signet. Aldon, who is taking the pre-seminary course, has had valuable experience in a sales capacity and in a managing position of his youth league.

New Perspectives

In Education

by Sharon Van Til

What is the Scriptural basis of Christian education? What is the educational responsibility of Christian parents and of the Church? What is the Christian concept of the child and of the authority of the teacher in Christian education?

The students in Mr. Veltkamp's History and Philosophy of Education course are attempting to answer these and other questions, as they try to formulate a Christian philosophy of education. In the past students and teachers have expressed a concern that students learn about many philosophies but neglect clarification of their own philosophy. In order that the education students at Dordt may become more aware of just what a Christian philosophy of education consists of, Mr. Veltkamp has spent much time and effort reconstructing the secondary part of Education 302. With the help of several students, he has compiled an extensive bibliography of books dealing with educational philosophy. With these books as guides, the students participate in panel discussions which deal with the broad concepts involved in a Christian philosophy of education, as well as with the practical application of these principles.

This new perspective in education at Dordt has and will be of great benefit to the education students as they go out to teach, but will also be of benefit in their everyday Christian living.

Editorial Elections

In Retrospect

by Bert Polman

The recent elections held for the positions of Diamond editor, and Signet editor and business manager are an important event in college affairs. Several aspects of these elections merit review.

These offices call for dedicated, experienced students to give leadership and service to these Dordt publications. Consequently, the student body must be given some time to seriously consider each of the candidates for their respective charges. This is not possible during a chapel service, when all students are concentrating on different matters.

Candidates for these offices should be given the privilege of campaigning, or else, they should be interviewed in the Diamond prior to election time. The electorate stretches in an equal manner with the qualifications and possible plans, if elected, of each of the candidates. After a campaign or a published interview, the elections can be responsibly held, even in chapel!

The system of nominating candidates needs revision. Original nominations should come from the Diamond and Signet circles and should be reviewed by the faculty sponsors and possibly by the Student Council. The final nomination for each position would then have to be approved by the faculty. Nominations from within each of the publications would make that at least some of the candidates have some practical experience in their respective fields. Some experience is certainly going to be helpful before assuming editorship functions.

In an interview, Mr. Sjoerdsmma, Director of Student Activities, stressed that only very few of the nominated students were willing to run for office. If the academically qualified and experienced students are unwilling to assume these responsibilities, the student body must be satisfied with less obvious experience, although possibly equal academic capacity, of the candidates.

If the staffs of the Diamond and Signet were to receive academic recognition through a Journalism course, these positions would no doubt be more appealing. Yet, need this be so? Service does not demand something tangible in return but rather thrives on appreciation. To be editor or manager requires a great amount of hard work; the end product is certainly worth the work, however, and the intangible satisfaction of having served Dordt and its student body can not be measured by hours of work.

It would be reassuring if more students were willing to campaign for these responsible positions next year.

by Glenn Van Wyhe

Outside, it was night. It was quiet—more than quiet. It was still. Though there was a small breeze rustling in the trees, there was no sound of breathing. One dry leaf tumbled a little way with the breeze. There was a cloud cover. Directly overhead it glowed. It soaked up sound and dropped silence.

The street was passively bright—lit by a long row of street lights. Shadows of trees were cut clear till they became indistinct and out of focus on the white walls of houses. But the white walls and the green of the grass and trees weren't the same. They were new colors—night colors.

There was the church—its broad brick wall glowing in the street light. The church was massive and strong. Its roof line rose higher into the night sky than when the daylight pushed it down. And the houses—they all towered higher. They had a new majesty against the black sky. Even the grass, with its new green, rose straighter and taller—every blade. The lawns were patterned with designs of infinite liquid darkness between the reaching, lighted blades of grass.

There was a side street that led up, and grew from the weak light into deep blackness. Beyond it was Darkness. Out of reach. Unknown. It was beyond the circle of light, of the familiar, that floated around. It was waiting.

The night was beautiful—peaceful and calm. And the shadows were dark, and waiting.

—30—

Be happy this summer. Don't let the shadows reach you. Goodbye.

Bravo! Gianni Schicchi!

by Grace Brouwer

The recent production of the opera Gianni Schicchi, shows activity in a new field here at Dordt. It was even the first attempt at opera here and certainly offered an evening of pure enjoyment for both the cast and audience. It was a well-chosen opera done in English and showed enough to avoid boredom in the audience, since this was a new experience for many of the spectators.

Due to this lack of education in opera, Kathy Buteyn in her beautiful "O, My Beloved Daddy," did not receive the applause she very definitely deserved. She was outstanding in her portrayal of Lauretta. Mr. Gabriele must also be commended on his fine job in acting the part of Gianni Schicchi. Except for problem with upstage acting and some rhythmic problems, he did an excellent job in dominating the action, as he should have. Mr. Wolesterstoff's voice seemed somewhat strained, especially Wednesday evening, however he seemed to have some trouble with the upper notes. On Tuesday night, however, he did a fine job in his salute to Florence.

Among the minor roles, Dave Bloemendaal must be recognized. He portrayed Betto every minute he was on stage and he always seemed to know exactly where he belonged. All of his acting was precise and he remained in the background when he was supposed to. Dave Netz, on the other hand, had some trouble with overacting and at times distracted from the main action.

In the scene where the three women, Marge Meyer, Lois Durhout, and Mrs. Ru.h Worsi, sing to Gianni there was much distraction from the main action due to the picking up of the papers backstage in a previous scene. However, the trio sounded good and the voices blended well.

Sharon Van Til, the pianist, must be given much credit for the success of this production. Her good adjustment on the spur of the moment and the composition on the spot certainly kept the action going smoothly. This was evident especially on Wednesday evening, when just for an instant there was panic because lines were confused.

Generally, the acting was better Wednesday evening whereas the singing was more brilliantly done Tuesday evening. Maybe a third night of performance could have combined the two and been a real climax.

The crews backstage—stage, lights, costumes, make-up—must also be recognized and given credit for making the total picture complete. The costumes could, however, have been more elaborate and colorful. Some of the colors were drab for a comedy.

Certainly this first production has set a precedent which future casts will have to work hard to outdo. Hopefully, we will see more done in opera in the future.

The Student Council Reports...

Campus Expansion

Several changes on the campus will be effected this summer to accommodate the increasing enrollment for next college term.

The present lounge will be used as a classroom. The Diamond and Signet offices will probably be relocated. The Faculty Lounge in the Commons will also become a classroom. More practice rooms will be built in the Music building and will be used as faculty offices.

Work on the library has finally begun, and is scheduled for completion by August, 1966.

Two large projects are also planned for next year. Tentative plans have been completed for a 200 bed dormitory and an enlargement to the Commons. The business office is presently working on applications for further Federal funds to finance construction.

Enlargement plans for the Commons call for expansion towards the north and east of the present building. Five thousand square feet will be added, ensuring seating accommodation for 450 students. Two serving lines will be used. The dishwashing room will be relocated near the north entry hall. A snack bar is also featured in the expansion plans.

--- B.P.

A long time ago, a small group of stalwarts decided to build an edifice for the whole world to observe and emulate. Since all great and lasting structures must have a sturdy foundation, the hardy group of pioneers decided to use the best plan available in building the foundation. After diligent search, they decided upon a blueprint instituted by a famous medieval architect, Geneva John. Block by block the foundation was built in well-defined, sharply-drawn lines until at last it was finished.

Now the second step in constructing a building is to construct a structure upon the impervious foundation. This the brave adventurers did using bricks which originated in a far-off land where men wore wooden shoes and grew tulips when they weren't busy blocking holes in the protective dikes with their fingers. These bricks, although they were the strongest available, had one particular strange characteristic—they only lasted for 60 years after which they crumbled into meaningless dust and had to be replaced.

Bit by bit the huge structure grew until at last it was finished. On the top, a perfectly vertical pinnacle, which at times seemed to pierce the lofty splendor of the clouds, was added.

Tidv little story wasn't it? Unfortunately it is not complete and since it has long been Crossfire's aim to reveal the whole truth, I am forced to add the following epilogue.

Remember the bricks which had to be replaced every 60 years? Well, as each successive span of bricks wore out they were replaced. At first the substitute bricks proved themselves sturdy and extremely capable of holding their own in the stalwart walls. Over the years, however, a gradual change was noticed. The bricks were no longer of their former superior quality. Some were noticeably bad etc. they were very weak and their faults were readily observable. No one seemed to really care enough about the building's future to reject them, however, and they were plastered into the walls in place. They would not experience excessive stress and strain.

What actually hurt the strength of the structure the most was the seemingly sturdy bricks whose inner construction was of dirt and filth, a fact which had been cleverly camouflaged since their conception at the kiln, for if the dirt became evident they resulting became undesirable. As more and more of these bricks were used as replacements the great and magnificent structure began to tilt alarmingly. The handsome pinnacle which had originally been perfectly vertical began to tilt and soon was almost horizontal. Then one day the building fell.

Many centuries later a small group of archeologists picked their way through the dusty ruins and found to their amazement that the foundation still remained perfectly intact.

Athletes’ Feats
by Dale Claerbaut

The Dordt College baseball team finished its successful season by defeating Estherville Junior College in two single games. The team, coached by Dr. Rozeboom, won 5 games and lost 4 this year. Except for Estherville, all the colleges played were four-year schools.

Recapping the last several games played, Dordt lost to Westmar in extra innings, 3:2. Cole (Westmar) singled, was sacrificed to second, advanced to third on an error and scored the winning run on a sacrifice fly ball. Dordt only mustered five hits, three of which came in the second inning, producing two runs and tying the score at two apiece. W. De Boer’s double was the only extra-base hit.

Dordt beat Northwestern College in the first game of a twin-bill, 5:1; but dropped the finale, 7:6. Willie De Boer pitched the first game and Miedema the second. In the first game Dordt jumped off to a 4-run lead in the first inning on a walk, three singles and an error. Rod De Boer, Jonker, and Ver Meer each had three singles. In the second game Du Mez had two of Dordt’s four hits.

Dordt played its only home game against Estherville and won 6-5, Miedema flying out, W. De Boer doubled, Ruter walked. From reports they all had a fine time.

The last game of the year was a make-up game with Estherville. Again Dordt had its confidence behind. They were behind 3-1 starting the sixth inning. Du Mez singled; Jonker grounded out; Ver Meer then walked. After Miedema flew out, W. De Boer doubled, Ruter was hit by a pitch, and Steisma singled to tie the game. In the last inning Du Mez and Jonker scored unearned runs. W. De Boer was credited with the victory and also had two singles. Steisma had two singles and a walk and Miedema had two singles.

An unfortunate accident happened on the baseball diamond during practice May 10. Dan Veldman, a sophomore pitcher, was warming up on the sidelines when an overthrown ball struck him on the side of the face. His nose was broken in two places and his contact lens caused temporary damage to his eye. His eye and nose are healing well. "That’s part of the game, just an unfortunate accident," Dan commented.

Girls Dazzling
Dordt students of the fairer sex formed a softball team and played two games with nearby colleges this year. On May 4, Dordt hosted Northwestern College’s softbalettes and defeated them 14-3. Jean Meyer homered and Glenda Haupt and Carol Du Waard also had some good hits. Sheryl Limberg amazed both the opposition and spectators alike with her pitching. However, it was a team victory. The other members played well too.

On May 12, the girls played Westmar in another home game. The game was decided in the first inning already when Dordt scored 13 runs. Practically every player shared in on the offensive. The final score was Dordt 30; Westmar 3.

Intramural Scene
by John Schuurman

The final leg of intramural sports is now almost completed. Just a couple of softball games remain. It was a good year, a successful year (if you’ll permit us a soapbox talk to express ourselves). Over half the student body participated, and I dare say they all had a good time.

Although all the softball games have not been completed, the winners have already been determined. The Theologians are the victors.

The archery tournament was held. Harlan Hansum won this event with a score of 348. Bob De Jong was runner-up with 329.

Ping pong was held this week, with Marlo De Jong and Judy Theune emerging as winners.

Although the hiking event had been postponed, the participants got together and went anyway. They hiked along the Sioux River for seven or eight miles. From reports they all had a fine time.

The Intramural Council met May 19 in order to schedule a meeting for the purpose of giving awards.

Thus ends the final intramural report of the year. I would like to thank Phil Kok and Eldon Dyk for their part in supplying statistics and the proceedings of the Intramural Council which were used.

Phi Kappa Sigma
Resume of Phi Kappa Sigma Activities

Phi Kappa Sigma, Dordt’s largest student organization, has completed its activities for the academic year. Although the club has been in existence only six months, it has already provided valuable activities for future teachers. An indication of the growth of the club is evinced by the fact that the membership has increased from the initial fifty-five members to the present roster of ninety-six elementary and secondary education students.

The organizational meeting, held Dec. 9, 1964, included the ratification of the constitution and election of officers. The film, “The Christian Teacher-Captive and Conqueror,” was shown and suggestions were made for future activities throughout the year.

On January 14, an informational meeting for all education students was held. Dr. Robbenson explained the Teacher Education Program, qualifications for Practice teaching, and requirements for certification.

At the third meeting of the organization, Mr. Lewis Arkema spoke on the topic of Federal Aid to Education, a very timely and controversial subject. Although not all agreed with Mr. Arkema’s ideas, by his unique approach he stimulated enthusiasm among club members to consider the matter of federal aid.

At the March meeting the group divided into four sections and listened to panel discussions by the practice teachers. A very worthwhile evening was spent with the practice teachers sharing the experiences they encountered during their six weeks of on-the-job training.

The last formal meeting of the season was highlighted by a guest lecture. Rev. Charles Dornbos, a former speech therapist, spoke to the club on the subject of speech therapy. He explained and illustrated the speech disorders which the teacher may encounter and the manner in which the teacher should react to various speech difficulties.

On May 13, the club sponsored an informal fun night for all members. A program of musical numbers and a one-act play was presented, physical exercise was provided by way of games, and the evening concluded with a campfire hootenanny. Thanks to all who helped make this night a success!

Although this year’s activities have terminated, plans have been made for the fall organizational meeting, as well as various activities for next year. Continued interest in the club and future activities will help in providing future teachers with valuable insights into the education field.

Incidentally, for those who are in doubt, "Phi Kappa Sigma" represents the initial letters for the Greek words “The fear of the Lord is wisdom.”

"COME ON!!"

Editorial

Finale! The last week! Those last exams; that late term paper; for some, their last days at Dordt. It is the beginning of the end of another collegiate year. But in a greater sense, it is the end of the beginning for the first senior class ever to graduate from Dordt College.

"Congratulations" is the symbol of the season. That word will be uttered more times by more people than at any other time of the year. More hands will be shaken than during a presidential election. The final moment of glory and achievement will climax—and pass. The graduates will soon be scattered from one end of the country to the other. The undergraduates will leave in a bustle of excitement and activity. Within twenty-four hours, the halls of Dordt College will be transformed from excited confusion and frantic activity to sudden, mute silence and emptiness.

For us undergraduates it will be a moment of release—some exuberant, some reluctant—into a summer of activity, work, sun, and—perhaps loneliness. It will certainly be a moment to remember. It will live in the minds of many until time is obsolete. Such is the moment of transition. We have achieved another milestone—and we go on.

But wait a moment. To you undergraduates—another year has passed. What has it been? What have you done, or undone? Has it been a fruitful year? Nearly a third of your life here on earth is passed. What have you accomplished during this time? Answer that question in terms of eternity.

And you graduates. We are proud of you, immensely proud. But as you stand at that climactic instant, degree in hand, in the zenith of your earthly honor, pause for a moment; and reflect. Reflect upon what you have accomplished and what that diploma symbolizes. Stand there before your God and tell Him what you have done, ask Him what you will do.

Then go out. Cover the continent. And remember that you are emissaries of Dordt College; but above all, ambassadors for our Lord.

Graduates, we salute you. Congratulations!

Consistently one hears the dictum that it is evil to deny or transgress the conscience; however, there is much disagreement as to the actual quiddity of conscience. And even though the human conscience cannot be systematically examined in the physics or chemistry laboratory, its study can be interesting and profitable.

The ancient Greeks thought of conscience as a simple self-consciousness or self-realization. The Lamarckian theory of "inherited acquired characteristics" relegates conscience to the category of "a developed form of the moral dictates of the herd instinct." In opposition to these theories is the teaching of Scripture.

The "locus classicus" on conscience (Rom. 2:14-15), says that the heathen have the law written on their hearts to which their conscience bears witness and through which their thoughts accuse or excuse one another. Thus there is an objective moral standard to which the human conscience has access. The conscience is an element of the "imago Dei" in man by which God upholds the moral order. When man fell in the garden, he marred the perfect image and thus lost his true righteousness and holiness. However, man did not become completely corrupt; i.e., he retained a vestige of God's image.

But contrary to the opinion of some ethical philosophers who say that it consists of both a human and a divine element, conscience is completely human as that faculty through which God speaks to man as a being created with a moral nature. The conscience is the standard that judges action just as the law judges those who transgress it. However, the conscience is not identical to the inward law for Paul makes a distinction between the two when he speaks of the conscience bearing witness to the law. The conscience then is that entirely human sense of moral rectitude which is in man by virtue of his being created in the image of God.
