
Pro Rege

Volume 32
Number 2 Fine Arts Issue 2003

Article 9

December 2003

Cinco de Mayo in Iowa

Lorna Van Gilst
Dordt College

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcollections.dordt.edu/pro_rege

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Van Gilst, Lorna (2003) "Cinco de Mayo in Iowa," Pro Rege: Vol. 32: No. 2, 15.

Available at: https://digitalcollections.dordt.edu/pro_rege/vol32/iss2/9

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the University Publications at Dordt Digital Collections. It has been accepted for inclusion in Pro Rege by an authorized administrator of Dordt Digital Collections. For more information, please contact ingrid.mulder@dordt.edu.

Cinco de Mayo in Iowa

Lorna Van Gilst

To remember the day of Mexican conquest in May of 1862,
the teachers ask all the children with surnames of Lopez, Gutierrez, Perez, Sanchez, and Catalan to supply the fourth grade class with Mexican comida:
40 tamales from Marisol,
40 gorditas from Miguel, 40 morelianes from Luis, frijoles and tacos and nachos and the richest of all tortes— tres leches—oozing the sweetness of three milks.

The Mexican mothers and fathers come as summoned,
a few minutes after one o'clock,
laden with the patient endeavors of a long morning
shredding beef,
pressing tomatoes and onions and jalapeños
into fresh-baked tortillas and leaves of corn.
They come to school, the padres of Luis and Miguel and Marisol, happy to comply.

But the children in fourth grade merely nibble the edges before they put down their Mexican treats, for they are already stuffed with the May 5 menu: “chicken nuggets,
mashed potatoes,
peas, and fruit.”

In wonder, the Mexican padres pack up 35 tamales,
35 morelianes,
35 gorditas--

and go home to a quiet Cinco de Mayo feast.