Dordt Choir Presents Cantata

“OUR REDEEMER IS BORN” TO BE PRESENTED DEC. 16

“Our Redeemer is Born,” a Christmas cantata which has been composed by Mr. Dale Grotenhuis, will be presented at the Sioux Center Public Auditorium on Wednesday evening, December 16, beginning at eight o’clock.

The Dordt College Choir, with fifty-five voices, will perform the first part of the cantata. Then, toward the end of the cantata, the Dordt Choir will be supplemented first by the Siouxland Women’s Chorus in the singing of “Mary’s Lullaby.” Immediately thereafter, the Siouxland male Chorus will join the women’s chorus and the college choir in the final three numbers of the cantata: “God So Loved The World,” “Let Our Gladness Know No End,” and “Psalm 150.” “Psalm 150” is scored for both chorus and brass sextet.

Accompanists for the cantata are Miss Annetta Vugteveen, a sophomore at Dordt, and Mrs. Dale Grotenhuis. The narrator for the cantata will be Mr. Peter De Boer, instructor in English.

The program will open with four traditional Christmas carols sung by the newly organized Siouxland Male Chorus. The men will sing “Tell Me Shepherds,” “While Shepherds Watched,” “We Three Kings,” and “The Boar’s Head Carol.”

Both the Male Chorus and the Women’s Chorus were begun this fall under the direction of Dale Grotenhuis. Members of the choirs represent local communities, and have been practicing weekly since October. Both choirs are sponsored by another new organization, the Dordt Boosters’ Club, established to provide, among other aims, finances for the carrying out of

--EDITORIAL--

Although this may not be the ideal place to do so, in this editorial I would like to thank Mr. Herman Nibbelink profusely for the excellent constructive criticism which he has so freely offered to the staff of The Dordt Diamond.

We appreciate his excellent criticism because he is such a qualified literary critic. He attended Dordt and was editor of the Signet '57. Upon graduation from Dordt he matriculated to Calvin College where he majored in English. Also, at Calvin, he contributed periodically to the Chimes. And now he is an instructor in English at one of our Christian high schools.

We, the Diamond staff, wish to assure Mr. Nibbelink that we agree wholeheartedly with his sound criticism. We agree that our sports editors have failed in reporting adequately and completely all the many sports events of Dordt's vast sports program. From now on we pledge ourselves to discuss in detail such things as the latest ping pong scores.

And we agree that in order for a college paper to be collegiate and Christian, it absolutely may not contain any humor. Humor is infinitely too juvenile and immature to appear in a paper written by college freshmen and sophomores. From now on, we humbly promise to write only those things which are serious and fundamental. After all, humor does not touch our lives vitally. There is no significant room in the life of the true Calvinist for humor!

As was mentioned before, Mr. Nibbelink graduated from Dordt in 1957. Because of this, we are sure that all his constructive criticisms were made in the spirit of brotherly love.

In conclusion, I wish to beg Mr. Nibbelink to forgive the Diamond staff for offending his keen knowledge of the English language. We can only hope that in the future we will be able to please him and show to our many high school readers that "dignified, collegiate atmosphere present at Dordt College."

The Alumni Mail Bag

November 25, 1959
Grand Rapids, Mich.

Dear Editor:

Thanksgiving season is once again opening its eyelids to Christians across the nation. Short recesses are beginning for student and teacher alike. I am now enjoying the first few hours of it rather than slaving on that next paper. It seems to me that this is also an appropriate time to send a note of thanks to The Diamond staff for the time they are putting into their work so that we as alumni may reap the benefits.

I began seminary life this fall at Calvin Seminary with much the same feeling that many of the freshmen began Dordt. I entered wondering what it was all going to be about and now at times I leave those "sacred halls" wondering what it was all about. However, one must admit that seminary life proves to be very beneficial to one's spiritual life. One does not realize the abundance of knowledge that the Scriptures contain until he has really studied it.

Sem life reminds me of Dordt in some respects. One of the main similarities is the close fellowship which is enjoyed by all. I hope that Dordt has not lost this distinctive characteristic. We must always remember that we have one common goal which is also Dordt's motto, Soli Deo Gloria.

I request your permission to make an appeal for more students to enter the ministry. I realize that it is not the only field which needs workers but it is one. One with a tremendous shortage.

Sincerely yours,
Gary Hofland ('57)

After having read "The Alumni Mail Bag" column, November 20, 1959, I felt compelled to make some sort of retaliatory reply to Mr. Nibbelink's biting sarcastic criticism of The Dordt Diamond.

I wish to comment not only upon the general attitude which pervades the article, but I also wish to say something about its content. I find it very difficult to decipher the intent with which Mr. Nibbelink writes his letter. Now no one can deny that criticism is appropriate to any endeavor. In fact criticism is that observant something which tempers and moulds an endeavor so that it becomes more effective and meaningful. But the foregoing has reference only to constructive criti-
Of Books and Men

Among the new books that have recently been added to the shelves of Dordt's library is one entitled The Calvinistic Concept of Culture by Rev. Henry R. Van Til of the Bible department at Calvin College. The book itself is new, having been published during the latter part of this year. I believe that it would be profitable to follow the introduction to the book as it is stated in the first chapter by the author himself.

The author points out that because Christians have taken the attitude that the Christian's duty lies in proclaiming the gospel, there is a conflict among Christians pertaining to culture. More difficulties are present, e.g., the Catholic claims of the church and that because Christians are called upon to bear a cross there will be a conflict with the world. Note here the antithesis.

The world is evil "lying in the evil one" but redeemable, and although sin is universal, yet God's grace is more abundant. God's grace restores man and following that, man is called upon "to be engaged actively in self-purification," which must be carried on by believers in culture. In the days of the early church the church became worldwide and world and meant the secular sphere rather than the meaning which it has in Scripture namely "its rebellion and separation from God."

Then Roman Catholicism became the "great system of supplementation... which insured the salvation of its members from the tomb by baptism, confirmation, eucharist, penance, orders, marriage, and extreme unction... which it has in Scripture namely its rebellion and separation from God."

The Protestant Reformation changed all that, and Calvin has placed culture in its proper perspective, preferring to surpass Luther who needed Christ only for salvation. Calvin needed salvation as the "renewal of the whole man and the restoration of all God's works. For Luther the Bible was the source of saving truth but for Calvin, Scripture was the norm (standard) for the whole existence."

The book is divided into three sections, the first concerns a discussion of Calvinism: the second, the history of Calvinistic culture; and the third, a discussion on the cultural duty of believers. The thesis as stated is "that if we confess to know God in the face of Jesus Christ... we cannot have true communion with the godless apostatizing culture of our day, although we must associate with men of the world. Indeed we are in the world but not of the world." a.h.

In every high school and college, the chief publication of each year is an annual. There are various main purposes which every staff wishes to utilize in its annual. There is an effort made to recall highlights of the year, etc., basketball games, banquets, programs, plays, etc. by way ofpretty and fitting comments. There are also pictures of staffs, clubs, organizations, teachers or professors, and students, plus other incidental snapshots. Each editor must plan his annual so that he can express some of the spirit present within his school. There must be a subtle distinction between degrees of importance placed on events. Those who look at an annual must see it as a unified whole, they must see an unwritten, besides a verbal, theme.

Dordt's annual is called the Signet. In the past it has established an excellent precedent for those which are to be published in the future. This year the editor of the Signet is Eunice Meyer. The students of Dordt chose Eunice because her potential in this field is unlimited. Her very able assistant editor is Joan De Vries. Joan has had experience in this field, having been on the annual staff in her high school. Eunice and Joan will receive much co-operation from a well-chosen staff, with the advice of the faculty advisor, Dr. Zinkand. Members of the staff are:

Editor—Eunice Meyer
Assistant Editor—Joan De Vries
Layout—Pat Ver Steeg, Helena Wiersma, Norma Schoolmeester
Business—Owen Bouma, Clarence Fransman
Photography—Dorothy Gorter, Irma Dykstra, Gertrude H. Modderman
Copy—Bill Van Tol, Marilyn Nienhuis, Elaine Te Velde, Donna Schutt, Tom Den Ouden
Art & Copy—Galen Meyer
Typists—Ruth Vander Voort, Eleonor Auwema, Hermina Van Dyken

Professor Ribbens is also helping in the background. Some initial work has been begun on this year's annual. To quote Eunice, "We've begun the preliminary preliminaries!" Putting out an annual is no easy undertaking and involves much work for the editor and her assistant and also the other members of the staff. The yearbook will be published by the American Yearbook Company, Hannibal, Missouri. The Signet is usually distributed throughout the high school and contains all the events of the year. This year's annual should prove to be the best yet and should live up to the standards of any critic.

The Sports Scene
On Thursday, November 19, the Dordt Defenders played host to the Raiders from Northwestern in their opening game of the '59-'60 season. Although the Defenders never held the lead, they gave a good account of themselves in a hotly contested first half. The score at halftime read 33-36 in favor of Northwestern. An excited student body from Dordt had high hopes of seeing Northwestern go down in defeat before the Defenders, but were doomed to disappointment. In the second half Northwestern's hotshots really let loose, although Dordt managed to remain within striking distance until the closing moments of the game.

As usual with the Dordt-Northwestern game, the auditorium was filled with fans, and also as usual, the Northwestern students showed their exuberance by showering everyone, confetti as the final buzzer sounded.

The Dordt students are to be congratulated on their excellent turnout and support of the team. A word of thanks also to the cheerleaders and band. The Dordt student body showed how to conduct oneself in the games, and when we meet Northwestern again, let's turn 'em upside down!

Blankespoor is as good as ever, and was high point man for both teams with 24 points. Vander Stoep and Beernink followed with 22 and 21 respectively. Both teams committed 20 fouls with Northwestern making 12 out of 22 and Dordt 17 out of 20.

The Temper of the Times

This week I'm going to discuss some of the social problems of the day.

The U.S. medical organization has to deal with foreign interns for almost one out of every four interns and residing physicians in their hospitals are foreign trained. Problems arise since many of the foreign interns cannot speak English or understand it, and since many have only meager training, being products of diploma mills or herb schools.

Before 1957 it wasn't uncommon for foreign physicians to send their credentials to the United States in their native language and then the hospitals would not have any idea of what their credentials were.

Now, an Educational Council for Foreign Medical Graduates has been organized. This council has been testing some foreign interns and now has the consent of all the hospitals to test all foreign interns in 1960. They are advising the hospitals to give their test to the foreign interns before they hire them.

Dr. Rappleye of Columbia University points out that the hospitals which have employed these foreign interns who will not be able to pass the examination do not have any idea as to what they are going to do since the U.S. is not graduating enough doctors to supply its needs. In comparison we find Russia graduates a surplus of doctors each year and that before long they will be caring for a greater part of the world with their physicians. And we all realize this will be a big propaganda device for the Russians.

In the South there has been a crackdown on the whites for keeping the Negroes from voting. The whites have been preventing their voting by threatening them with physical harm and with loss of employment, by requiring them to pass rigid qualification tests, and by making it very inconvenient for them to vote. In sixteen counties Negroes are not even registered.

Attorney General Rogers is very disgusted with the situation and therefore he has stated that some laws are going to be enforced. One of the laws that have been enforced states that a person who deprives someone of constitutional rights can be sentenced to ten years.

I do not know how you feel concerning this matter, but I feel it is about time the U.S. cracks down on the whites and helps the Negro, who since 1870 has had the constitutional right to vote, but who could not due to social pressures. —R.B.
